Sen. Kefauver Attacks Private Power Decision

Says Eisenhower Order Proposes to Subsidize Combine

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) charged today that the administration proposes to subsidize a private power combine in the Tennessee Valley through a contract with the Atomic Energy Commission.

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Senate, Kefauver attacked the administration's decision to have the AEC enter into a long-term contract with a private power group to supply power into the TVA system.

This decision, he said, springs from "the well-known antipathy of the Eisenhower administration for TVA" and is just a roundabout way of taking "a whack at TVA."

Kefauver told the Senate that it is "perfectly clear" that the proposed contract between the AEC and the Middle South Utilities and Southern Companies group, is "nothing but a subsidy for the private power firms."

Estimates Higher Costs
The AEC, he said, estimates that the private power arrangement will cost $3,685,000 more annually than the same power from TVA, while the TVA estimates the increased annual cost at $5,567,000. The total additional cost to the taxpayers over the proposed 25-year span of the contract would be at least $92,125,000, he said.

Terming the proposal "bad from every standpoint," Kefauver appealed to the Senate to help in preventing execution of the contract.

For the past several days, the Southern Democrats have been huddling over possible legislative steps to stop the administration plan to have a private power group deliver power into the TVA system for indirect use by the atomic plant at Paducah, Ky.

Sen. John J. Sparkman (D-Ala.) said, however, that so far the Democrats have been unable to settle upon a feasible procedure on which to base their fight.

Hope Lies In Joint Group
One hope of the Democrats is that the contract may be countermanded in the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, where the administration power decision has been sharply attacked by committee Democrats.

Failing that, the Democrats are considering transferring the fight to the House and Senate floors, introducing a resolution or tacking a rider onto an appropriation bill banning any such contract.

The appropriation approach has been stymied, at least until a supplemental appropriation bill comes along, by the fact that President Eisenhower did not direct the AEC to enter into a 25-year power contract with the Mid-South-Southern combine until after the independent offices appropriations bill had been approved by Congress.

Sparkman gave assurance that "if the opportunity presents itself, we won't hesitate to fight to kill the contract."

Contract Hits TVA
He termed the administration decision to have a private power group supply power into the TVA system rather than expand TVA's own capacity "a solar plexus blow at TVA."

In addition, he said, the administration has "heaped insult on injury" by specifying that TVA will pay the extra cost of the private power above its own estimates for supplying the power.

Sparkman was also critical of the administration for "short-circuiting Congress" by directing AEC to enter into the contract without first consulting the atomic energy committee.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith Wins Maine Primary Over Pro-McCarthy Opponent

PORTLAND, Me. (U.P.) — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith won a smashing election victory in the Maine Republican primary, viewed in some quarters as a test of McCarthyism, almost complete returns showed today.

The silver haired woman senator defeated her pro-McCarthy opponent, Robert L. Jones of Biddeford, by almost a five to one margin. The victory assured her reelection in the strongly Republican state. She will oppose Democrat Paul A. Fullam, a history professor at Colby College, in the November election.

With 620 of 623 precincts reporting, Senator Smith had 96,197 votes to 20,239 for Jones.
Senator Smith declined to attribute her victory to the McCarthy issue after it became apparent that she had won. She said she "wanted some time to evaluate the returns."

Speculation that the GOP Senate contest would be a test of McCarthy's power to swing elections came from a number of factors. Chief among them was Senator Smith's 1950 "declaration of conscience" which deplored "reckless methods" of some congressional investigators.

The declaration was widely interpreted as criticism of Senator McCarthy.

Another principal factor was Jones' assertion that his platform of "Americanism" included "McCarthyism." Jones defined McCarthyism as "ferreting out Communists."
Senator Smith's supporters charged during the campaign that McCarthy "sent Jones" to Maine to oppose Senator Smith and also charged that the campaign was financed by "Texas oil money."

Jones denied these allegations and on primary night said he had not spoken with McCarthy "since February."

Burklow Plea for Release from Prison Denied; Ryan Case Studied

Petitions of Two Convicts Heard By Judge Wright

Judge Clarence E. Wright yesterday heard the pleas of two Menard penitentiary convicts seeking their release on petitions filed in circuit court here, denying the petition of one and taking the case of the other under advisement pending written briefs.

Denied was the petition of John Burklow, sentenced to a term of one year to life on an indictment charging burglary and larceny and receiving stolen property after he pleaded guilty to chicken theft on Feb. 3, 1940.

The case of James Ryan, sentenced to a life term at Menard after his plea of guilty July 9, 1943, to an indictment charging him with the poison hamburger murder of Samuel Black, elderly Gallatin county farmer, was taken under advisement.

Gives Time to File Briefs

Judge Wright, from Carbondale, gave Ryan's attorney, Zeno Middleton of East St. Louis, ten days in which to file briefs and State's Attorney Glen O. Jones five more days in which to file an answer before he passes judgment. Jones represented the state in both cases.

The written briefs came up in Middleton's contention that his client was denied his constitutional rights because a preliminary hearing was not held. Judge Wright contended that this was not necessary if not demanded but Middleton said he would like to file his briefs on the question and Wright acquiesced.

Ryan is seeking his freedom under the provisions of the Illinois Post-Conviction act, charging he was denied his constitutional rights. Burklow filed his petition seeking a writ of habeas corpus, contending he was illegally held in the prison.

Produces Court Record

Judge Wright emphasized to Middleton and to Atty. Harry L. McCabe and Atty. Robert Wilson, counsel for Burklow, that the hearings did not involve the guilt of innocence of the two men, as they already had pleaded guilty to the charges, but to the points brought up in their petitions.

Burklow charged that he wasn't aware of or advised of his constitutional rights, that he had no counsel, that he did not know the nature of his indictment, that he never saw a copy of the indictment or the list of witnesses who would appear against him, as the law provides.

Judge Wright produced the court record at the arraignment, at which Judge D. F. Rumsey presided. He said the record showed Rumsey had furnished him with a copy of the indictment, had given him a list of jurors and witnesses, and advised him of his rights and the consequences if he

Burklow Admits Unsolved Burglary

John Burklow, brought here from Menard Penitentiary yesterday for his hearing on a habeas corpus petition, confessed an unsolved burglary while here, Sheriff Paul Spangler announced.

Burklow admitted to Spangler that he burglarized the Azar market Feb. 2, 1951, while out on parole from the penitentiary.

He is serving a prison term for burglary and larceny.

Democrat Hits Benson Wheat Control Order

Benson Sets Next Year's Allotment at 55 Million Acres

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — A Democratic farm leader today ripped into an administration plan to impose perhaps the stiffest agriculture production curbs in history as an attempt to "blackmail" the American farmer.

Rep. Harold D. Cooley (D-N.C.), ranking Democrat on the House Agriculture committee, accused Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson of "attempting to make himself a dictator and czar over the American farmers" through the plan.

Benson revealed the sweeping farm control program at a news conference Monday at which he also called for a 12.7 per cent acreage cut in the 1955 wheat crop. Benson set next year's national wheat allotment at 55 million acres — lowest level permitted under present farm law.

It was in connection with the prospect of continued production curbs on wheat that Benson announced the new across-the-board crop control plan. He said that wheat farmers and others will have to comply with acreage allotments set on any basic crop next year to be eligible for government price supports on any one crop.

To Offer Amendment

In addition, the larger farmers—those who have at least 10 acres of land diverted from production of "basic" crops by government acreage controls—will be assigned allotments for every crop they produce except hay and pasture. Government acreage controls are now in force on the so-called basic crops of corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco and peanuts.

Cooley served notice that he may try to cancel Benson's plan through an amendment to the "catch-all" farm bill the House Agriculture committee is now drafting.

Committee Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R-Kan.) would not comment directly on the plan. But he predicted it would strengthen chances for a one-year extension of the present 90 per cent of parity support program on the basic crops. The committee has put such an extension into its pending bill over the administration opposition.

Crowds lined the sidewalks for blocks to watch the parade proceed through the downtown business district and end at the high school, where a big rally was held in the auditorium. Eldorado Citizens Show Unity in Community Development Program

Groups Pledge Loyalty in Gigantic Bandwagon Affair

Eldorado citizens presented a united front to the world Monday pledging to "keep the wheels rolling" in a gigantic program as their community development program converted from a program of study to a program of action.

Monday was designated as Bandwagon Day in Eldorado and all citizens were invited to get "on the bandwagon" and no one refused the invitation. It was community unity that has seldom been equaled and never excelled.

Every phase of community life was represented and spokesmen for the many groups stepped forward to pledge 100 per cent loyalty of their group for the program.

The evening's activity got underway with a big parade, starting shortly after 6:30.

At 8 o'clock a program began in the high school auditorium and it was nearly 10:30 before the audience was dismissed. But interest was so great that hardly anyone left the packed auditorium.

Many outside interests were represented and there were talks by distinguished guests, but the people of Eldorado were the stars of the show as they came forward group by group to sincerely voice their approval and promise to work in any way that would be for the betterment of their city.

During the roll call of organizations—starting with labor and going right down the line to include all segments of community life—members of the groups were asked to stand. Each group was well represented, but when the roll call reached the churches, practically everyone in the huge hall stood up.

Christianity Needed, Speaker Says
This was one of the most impressive phases of the program—to see that all those interested in their town were closely affiliated with a church and willing to stand up and be counted.

This would seem to be a good omen for the successful outcome of the development program and fit in perfectly with the theme of the address by guest speaker John Nuveen, investment broker of Chicago.

Mr. Nuveen stressed that problems, local, statewide, national or worldwide, could only be successfully solved when the spirit of Christianity was allowed to enter. "Christianity and Democracy go hand-in-hand. We cannot neglect one for the other."

"Too often we neglect the spiritual in our efforts to build material things," the speaker stated.

Rebel Forces Threaten 45 Mile Section

Major Battle Shaping Up for Rail Center

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (U.P.) — Anti-Communist Guatemalan rebel forces today opened a major drive for control of the Puerto Barrios-Guatemala City railway, linking the capital with its principal Caribbean port.

Rebel headquarters claims, and admissions in a government communique, indicated the rebel forces now threaten a 45-mile section of the railway, about 25 miles inside the country from the Honduras frontier, and extending from Morales to Gualan.

A major battle appeared to be shaping up for control of the important rail center of Zacapa, 75 miles from the Guatemalan capital and 20 miles west of Gualan where one battle already has been fought.

Claim Capture of 18 Towns

The rebels claimed they have captured and hold 18 towns in their drive to overthrow the leftist regime of President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman.

But the main effort obviously centered along the railway—the nation's sole railway line extending from the Caribbean to the Pacific Coast through Guatemala City.

The rebel forces were pressing the fight after expiration of an ultimatum to President Arbenz demanding unconditional surrender before 2 p. m. Monday.

The official Guatemalan radio said a battle had been fought between regular and rebel forces at Bananera, the site of an airfield near Morales.

The government also admitted the rebels had pushed to Gualan, some 25 miles inside Guatemala from Honduras and an important rail center.

A government communique claimed the rebels were repulsed with heavy losses in both encounters.

Government Controls Port

The government communique also claimed that rebel land forces had been driven out of the port city of Puerto Barrios, which they held briefly, and that the rebel schooner Sista, loaded with rebel arms and ammunition, was captured. Independent shipping sources confirmed that the government controls the port.

The Guatemalan announcement conceded, however, that heavy government casualties had been suffered in the fighting for the Caribbean port.

The rebels claimed to have won control of the famed town of Esquipulas, site of the "Black Christ" statue built on commission from the Spanish conquistadores.

An earlier government communique unwittingly indicated that Guatemalan army troops were using their newly purchased Iron Curtain arms in their battle against the rebels.

"The army, with regular troops, well trained and equipped with modern armament, attacked the rebels' position and forced them to fall back after overcoming stubborn resistance," this communique said in reference to the fight at Gualan.

In an attempt to justify purchase of arms from Communist countries, Guatemala had charged that democratic nations would not sell her munitions and that the government was compelled to deal with the Reds in order to set up a defense of the country.

GOVERNMENT IS BIG BUSINESS

The total number of government employees in the State of Illinois in October, 1953, was equal to the combined population shown by the 1950 census of the cities of Peoria, Rockford, East St. Louis, Bloomington and Kankakee.

There were 195,567 civilian employees of the federal government in Illinois in 1953; 42,982 on the State of Illinois payroll; 198,221 employees of Illinois local governments; a total of 346,770 government employees in Illinois supported by the taxpayers.

The number of government employees in Illinois has increased by 15,645 since 1950. Of this total increase, 14,306 were local government employees, 632 were State government employees, 707 were federal employees.

Employees of Illinois school districts increased by 10,547 between 1950 and 1953; of counties by 4,356; by special districts, including townships, by 71. Employees of Illinois cities dropped by 648.

There was one government employee in Illinois in 1950 for every ten non-government workers in Illinois in 1950.

Government is big business. It's getting bigger every day.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

DREW PEARSON Says: Senator Hunt Was Threatened With Prosecution Of His Son Unless He Withdrew From Senate Race; Hunt Brooded Over Son's Misfortunes; New Pressure Techniques Used In Senate.

WASHINGTON. — Sen. Lester Hunt of Wyoming, who ended his life with a rifle bullet last week, had been living under the fear of political blackmail in connection with his son.

On one occasion, Republican Sen. Herman Welker of Idaho had sent word to Hunt that if he would not run for re-election, his son, arrested on a morals charge, would not be prosecuted.

For months Senator Hunt lived under the shadow of this threat, suffering from the same of something that was not his doing. Last December he told this column that for a long time he would not go down to the Senate restaurant to eat with other senators, but had lunch sent up to his office where he ate alone.

The incident was one of the lowest types of political pressure this writer has seen in many years and illustrates the lengths to which certain Republicans will go to capture one seat in the narrowly balanced Senate.

It also illustrates the new technique used by certain McCarthyites to pressure other senators, such as Roy Cohn's threat against Senator Henry Jackson of Washington, and the indirect threat aimed at Senator Symington of Missouri.

This writer had known of the threat against Senator Hunt as early as last December, but because the senator seemed so emotionally upset, I did not report the pressure used by Senator Welker to make him withdraw from the Senate race. Perhaps if I had brought the whole thing into the healthy light of day, Senator Hunt might have readjusted himself some time ago and might be alive today.

MODERN MAN

I had first met Hunt when he was governor of Wyoming and climbed aboard the Friendship Train eight years ago as it reached the western end of his state. He rode with us until we arrived in Cheyenne. A quiet, unassuming person, Hunt had come to Wyoming first as a baseball player, then settled down to practice dentistry in Lander up near the Shoshone Indian reservation.

In the Senate, he could always be found voting on the side of the underdog, and though he was not as vocal as Senator Tobey, he did a fine, conscientious job as a member of the Kefauver committee which investigated crime.

The world began to come to an end for Senator Hunt when, last year, his son was arrested in Lafayette Park on a morals charge. Since it was a first offense, he was charged with a misdemeanor, and the senator was asked by the Washington police to work with his son to straighten him out.

The charge lay on the police record and for the time being was not prosecuted.

Then suddenly, Senator Welker telephoned a mutual friend of Hunt's in Wyoming, stating that if Hunt would withdraw from the Senate race, his son would not be prosecuted.

Hunt, a Democrat, was extremely popular in Wyoming and sure of re-election. His term was to expire this year, and if he withdrew, a Republican was reasonably sure of election, thus giving the Republicans a better chance to control the Senate.

The Welker message was relayed to Hunt through his close friends Tracy McCracken, Democratic national committeeman from Wyoming and Joe O'Mahoney, ex-senator from Wyoming.

Hunt told this column last December that when he got the message and Mrs. Hunt debated it for a week, then decided that no matter how much he wanted to protect his son, he would not be blackmailed out of public office. So he sent word that he would not withdraw.

TERRIBLE ORDEAL

One day later, the Washington Times-Herald, then owned by Col. Robert McCormick, featured the story of his son's morals charge on page one, and immediately thereafter, Inspector Roy Blik, head of the D. C. vice squad, was called to Capitol Hill.

Senator Hunt told this column that Blik later reported to him that Welker and Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations committee, had handed him an envelope and told him to read the contents.

Blik did so and found the envelope contained his resignation. He asked what it meant. The senators told him to sign it. They went on to explain that that was what happened when a police officer failed to prosecute, as in the Hunt boy's case.

Blik explained that where a youngster was connected with a church, as in the case of the Hunt boy who was studying for the ministry, the usual police practice was to get in touch with his church and his parents and get him straightened out without prosecution, especially if he was a first offender.

But Senator Welker said that if there was no prosecution he might feel constrained to make a speech on the Senate floor.

Shortly thereafter, young Hunt was brought to trial. Orders were given in the U. S. attorney's office to push the prosecution. Senator Hunt sat in court throughout the trial. He looked as if he was almost dying before men's eyes.

The policeman who arrested young Hunt had made no arrests that day, and some attorneys have charged plainclothesmen with unfairly trying to increase the number of their arrest. One attorney familiar with D. C. criminal procedure who watched the proceedings told me that the boy should have been acquitted on the ground that the plainclothesman whom young Hunt was charged with soliciting, actually had done the soliciting himself. But the prosecution was vigorous and the verdict went against the Hunt boy.

Mrs. Hunt, the senator said later, hardly survived the trial. She didn't eat for a week.

"If the opposition brings this up in the Senate race," he told this column, "I shall withdraw."

The above conversation took place in late December. The senator at that time said he could not bear to face his colleagues in the Senate. He doubted if he would even appear on the Senate floor. His hair had turned almost white. His face was pale. We urged him to avoid people, told him that public sympathy was with him. Eventually he got around more, seemed to be more his old self.

Then two weeks ago he went to the hospital for a physical check and announced that he would not run again. It was no secret that he had been having kidney trouble for some time. But I am sure that on top of this, Lester Hunt, a much more sensitive soul than his colleagues realized, just could not bear the thought of having his son's misfortunes become the subject of whispers in his re-election campaign.

Those must have been some of the worries that troubled Senator Hunt as he left his home early the other morning, a .22 rifle half hidden under his coat.

AMA Report May Change Smoking Habits

Society Study Links Cigarettes to Cancer And Heart Disease

SAN FRANCISCO, AP — Dr. Charles Cameron, medical and scientific director of the American Cancer Society, predicted the nation's smoking habits will change as a result of a study showing a link between cigarettes, lung cancer and heart disease.

Cameron and two other prominent researchers reported to the American Medical Association convention Monday that cigarette smoking "certainly shortens" the life expectancy of Americans.

In particular, they reported that more men who are regular smokers die of cancer and heart disease than non-smoking men. They stressed that they based their report on a "chain of circumstantial evidence."

"I do believe we'll see a change in smoking habits among doctors and some change in the smoking habits of the American people within a year," Cameron said.

One Chance in 50

Cameron said a 50-year-old man who smokes a pack or more of cigarettes a day has twice as much likelihood of dying within 18 months as the 50-year-old man who has never smoked.

He said the man of 50 who smokes a pack or more a day has about one chance in 50 of dying within a year and a half. But the non-smoker has about one chance in 100 of dying in the same period.

Cameron and his associates, Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond, director of the Cancer Society's Statistical Research Division, and Dr. Daniel Horn, assistant statistics research director, said they themselves have given up smoking cigarettes.

Cameron advised teen-agers not to smoke and said the society would advise parents to try to keep their children from smoking.

The report indicated that smoking does not necessarily show its effects until after "20 or 30 years" of smoking a pack a day. In the case of a heart ailment, smoking "may be the thing that would push a person over the ledge."

The three researchers said they felt their study is "so conclusive" that the big problem now is to find out the agent in cigarettes that accounts for the higher death rate. "It could be the type of tobacco or whether a person inhales." Hammond said. He added he would "guess" that the tar in cigarettes is an agent.

"At any rate, there is a real possibility now of finding the causes of cancer and eliminating them," he said.

MRS. JOHN BUCHER

Cairo Woman's Cake with Mrs. Tucker's Shortening "Turned Out Beautifully!"

"I was happy to try Mrs. Tucker's Shortening in my Pineapple Upside Down Cake," says Mrs. John Bucher, 528 21st St., Cairo, Ill. "Mrs. Tucker's creamed so easily that I can readily understand why Mrs. Tucker's slogan is 'The CREAMIEST Speed-Mix Shortening in the world.' My cake turned out beautifully—light, moist, tender and perfectly delicious! No wonder Mrs. Tucker guarantees you success when you make a cake with her fine ALL-Vegetable Shortening."

Here's Mrs. Tucker's amazing triple guarantee—If you don't say: "(1) Mrs. Tucker's makes any bread or cake richer, more moist and tender. . . (2) any pastry lighter and flakier. . . (3) any fried foods tastier and more digestible," send the recipe to Mrs. Tucker telling what you don't like about the results, and she will pay you for all the ingredients used PLUS a dollar for your time.

Marlene Dietrich Is Eye-Popping Hit

LONDON (AP)—Marlene Dietrich, wearing an evening gown transparent from the waist up, was an eye-popping hit Monday night in her debut at the Cafe de Paris in the heart of London's movie district.

Crowds jammed the streets to watch the celebrities. Celebrities jammed the cafe to watch Marlene. Marlene sang some songs, including one entitled, "Look Me Over Closely."

Noel Coward introduced Marlene to more than 500 persons, "shoe-horned" into the cabaret which normally accommodates about 300.

In her husky, slightly-accented voice, Marlene intoned: "Look me over closely. Tell me what you see. 'A lady likes to look her best Before she pours the tea.'"

The country of Iraq was created at the end of World War II.

The pastor, Rev. Jewel Jackson, will preach and Rev. Floyd Lacey will direct the singing. Everyone is invited.

Peterman Reports Lack of Summer Jobs for Students

SALEM, Ill. (AP)—Mark A. Peterman, Democratic candidate for superintendent of public instruction, said today there is a "serious" shortage of summer jobs for high school students. The shortage will have a "devastating effect" on college attendance this fall, he said.

The Springfield teacher said a lack of money earned this summer by young people "coupled with the fact that their parents' income has already been reduced" by business conditions will cut college rolls.

"I challenge the business leaders to offer students summer jobs to prove that business is picking up," he said. "They will do this if they believe their own optimistic business forecasts."

Peterman said in his speech, prepared for delivery at the 71st annual Salem Soldier's and Sailor's Reunion, that the Republican Party is the "hard times party."

He said there was a drop of four million dollars in sales tax collections for the first five months of 1954, compared with the same 1953 period, and said this reflected declining business conditions in Illinois.

St. Louis Rose Grower Indicted

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A rose is a rose and may smell just as sweet by another name but the federal grand jury here believes it can be misleading.

The grand jury late Monday indicted John T. Southwell, Devon, Pa., doing business as the "Garden Guild of America," on 22 charges of using the mails to defraud.

The indictment said Southwell's "magic roses" were just common multiflora and their "dull" thorns were just as sharp as any other rose bush.

It said the "Garden Guild of America" was a "fiction of words" in Southwell's national business.

Question Vagrant In Torch Murder of Mother, 2 Children

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (AP)—A 43-year old vagrant was held today for questioning in the torch murder of a young mother and her two children.

Police held Edward Beatty, who was found wandering on the railroad tracks 12 miles from the ruins of the lonely cabin in the bush country where the bodies of Mrs. Hedwig Kopplin, a German immigrant, and her two children were found.

The young mother's burned and beaten body was found Saturday lying a few yards from the smoldering ruins of her cabin. Her hands were lashed behind her back and a rope was knotted around her throat.

An autopsy showed that Mrs. Kopplin died of a fractured skull after being beaten on the head and possibly assaulted.

Her husband, Norst, was working at a railway camp 200 miles away when the triple murders were committed.

Pickfords Purchase Part of Buena Vista Townsite for Expansion

By Alta Porter
An expansion program by the Pickford Greenhouse owners includes the purchase of a good part of the original townsite of Buena Vista, on Route 13, one mile west of Harrisburg.

Conclusion of a real estate transfer by the Woolcott and Skaggs families to Raymond and Norman Pickford, is reported by the Ertan Real Estate Brokers. Town lots which originally constituted 80 acres of land, excepting lots bordering Rt. 13 and improved with residential property, are in the parcel of land which the Pickfords have bought.

The newly acquired property is across Highway 13 from the Pickford greenhouses built at Cherryville on the south side of Rt. 13, 20 years ago. It is the intention of Raymond and Norman Pickford to build additional glass houses on the Buena Vista property and expand considerably their business of growing and marketing tomatoes.

At present there are 11,000 tomato plants under glass in the one-and-one-fourth acres that constitute the Pickford greenhouses. Two crops of tomatoes are grown each year. One beginning in April and continuing until July, when the WR3 tomatoes are marketed. The fall crop is from "Michigan State Forcing" plants, from which tomatoes are marketed between early October and the middle of January. Between each crop the beds are sterilized, fertilized, the plants raised in pots and reset in the glass houses.

An average of three to four hundred baskets of tomatoes are picked daily during the season of production, the peak of production being 800 baskets in one day. After the local trade is supplied the bulk of the crop is shipped via truck to Chicago, reaching the market within 18 hours after it leaves the vine. Planting, tending and harvesting the tomatoes grown at present employs five men besides the Pickford brothers: James Parker, Charles Allen, J. R. Waddell, Walter Smith and E. H. Bond. The latter takes care of the boiler by which the glass houses are heated in fall and winter. All are long term employees who have been employed from three to five years at the greenhouses.

The late John J. Pickford was the founder of the Pickford greenhouses, which originated at Raleigh 41 years ago. His widow, Mrs. Bertha Pickford, recalls their first hothouse-grown lettuce and tomatoes, at the site of the present Lone Oak church building.

They were newly married, and had met while each of them were visiting in Harrisburg. She was here visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George DeWoody. Mr. Pickford was reared in Youngstown, Ohio. Their first home was built on Ford street.

Mr. Pickford was a business adventurer and with daring amassed much property during his lifetime. He owned and operated coal mines, apartment houses, the greenhouses and a flower store. A disastrous storm in 1937 destroyed the greenhouses in which more than 20,000 rose bushes were growing. At that time cut flowers for commercial purposes were grown and the flower shop in this city, which was for several years without competition, was the outlet for many cut flowers.

The flower shop and apartment building at 112 West Poplar street have always been under the superintendency of Mrs. Pickford, and each of their six children have at various times helped her in the flower shop. At present a grand-daughter, Mary Ann, is her chief assistant at the flower shop and Mary Ann is developing skill as a designer of wreaths, sprays and corsages.

Mr. Pickford also manages the other five apartment houses, with a total of 27 furnished apartments under her supervision. Their upkeep is a major project for the matriarch of the Pickford family, who is hoping that a son, John, presently returning home from California, will remain and will rejoin the family entente, to which he was such a help while living here.

Bob, the youngest son is employed as an inspector by General Motors in Ortonville, Mich., at an automobile factory.

Lucille, the eldest daughter, is the wife of Ronald Favreau, and resides in Carbondale, where her husband is employed by the City Water department.

The other daughter, Virginia, is the wife of Harry Scott, immigration official at Miami, Florida. Mrs. Pickford says that each of her children have special abilities and differ in adaptability to a certain extent. She is much pleased that two of the boys have chosen to carry on in the greenhouse business.

With little time for recreation herself, she does have one amusement that carries over from her life with Mr. Pickford. They were both movie fans and Mrs. Pickford can sit through a good feature twice with perfect enjoyment.

Tuscarora Indians from North Carolina, joining the five Iroquois Indian nations in the 18th century, named the town of Chataqua, N. Y., for their village, Chataqua, on the Neuse River.

THE STORY: After using his savings to buy an old car to be transformed into a hot rod, Ricky Madison, 16, realizes he has made a bad bargain. So he gets a job to earn money to keep his car and makes a deal with the man who sold him the car to help out around the repair shop in return for use of his tools.

Ricky leaned against the wall. "I wouldn't call it play," he said. "I've got a lot to learn before Merle and I go into business together."

"I... I don't understand," Ricky's father said. "It's simple," Ricky answered. "We're fixing up the coupe together. If we can sell it and make a profit, Merle's going to be my partner, making custom cars. In four or five years we'll have something."

"Four or five years," Ricky's mother repeated. "But... what about your plans for college?"

"I'm not going to college," Ricky said. "Merle doesn't think I have to."

"Ricky, are you out of your mind? What does Merle know about...?" His mother was so upset she couldn't find the right words.

"Merle knows a lot about cars," Ricky said. "More than I could learn in college, I bet."

"Is that all you want to know in life?" Ricky's father asked, trying to remain calm.

Ricky nodded. "I want to build custom cars."

Ricky's mother answered him angrily. "Cars! For the sake of cars you intend to give up everything and become a partner of the most shiftless, worthless, unsavory..."

"Merle's just as good as anybody else in this town," Ricky said defiantly. "And he knows a lot that other people don't know."

"I'm sure he does," Ricky's mother said bitterly. "What an ideal you picked."

"Now wait a minute," Ricky's father said. "Son, if you want to build custom cars, there's not a thing wrong with the idea. But that's even more reason why you should go to college. Building cars is a job that takes an engineer as well as a mechanic. You could study engineering and design and metals, and when you graduated you would be equipped to take other people's cars and work on them."

"You can't beat practical knowledge," Ricky said. "That's what Merle says."

"I'm not saying anything against practical knowledge. It's essential. But you get that at college too. The point is, with what you are learning now, plus your college education, you'll be able to get ahead in life and make something of yourself."

"All I want is my own speed and custom shop," Ricky said, looking at his parents with a plea for understanding in his eyes. "If

I'm good, people will come to me and I'll go places. I don't want to go to college. I want to stay here and start my business. "I see," his mother said. "I see the Merle Connor of the future." She got up and began to clear away the dishes. His father also looked as though he were in mourning.

His coupe was waiting for him in the driveway. In the month he'd had it, it hadn't changed much on the outside. He had fixed the spring, and it rode level now, but the real progress had been made inside.

He got in and started the motor, smiling as it sounded tight and even. He could thank Merle for that. He'd gone to Merle with a lot of fancy speed ideas. When Ricky had finished talking, Merle had thrown away his cigarette and yawned.

"You might as well try to hop-up the kitchen stove as what you've got here. Planning to buy a new motor, are you?"

"I can't."

"All right. We'll start with what you've got. Get all the tired parts fixed, and then maybe you'll have something to work on."

That's the way they had started. When he was through with his chores around the garage he would get busy on his car. For all the information he had picked up reading the auto magazines, it had taken Merle, standing by lazily, directing him with a kind of impersonal sarcasm, to teach him the basic approach to rebuilding a car.

At first Merle had been content to stand around and haw-haw at Ricky's stupidity. But the way Ricky had hung on, grimly trying to learn, had quickened Merle's interest. It wasn't long before Merle was neglecting the tires people had brought to be fixed, and the other minor jobs he attracted, to give cooperation to Ricky.

Ricky hadn't done much driving that month, but Merle, always an accomplished borrower of tools, he didn't have, had taken him on a tour of how to put strength and vigor back into tired iron.

Merle had shown Ricky how to do a valve and ring job, and while the block was out, Merle had loaded it on his truck, along with the heads and the flywheel.

"I know a guy runs a machine shop owes me a favor," Merle said. The block had been ported and relieved to allow better breathing and escape for the exhaust gases. The iron heads had been milled to boost compression, and the flywheel lightened.

"You get some speed equipment now," Merle had grunted. "We got something to hang it on. Now you're ready for that straight pipe."

That was their weak spot. Anything they had to buy. They had worked on the body too. Nothing fancy, just what it took to iron out the dents, smooth it and get it ready for leading, scraping and repainting. Ricky

Purchasing Value Of Dollar Lowest Point in 169 Years

WASHINGTON (AP)—The cost of living rose three-tenths of 1 per cent last month, reversing a three-month decline, the government reported today.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics announcement was underscored by a report from New York that the purchasing value of the dollar fell to the lowest point in its 169-year history in May.

The National Industrial Conference board report said the value of $1 dipped to 54.1 cents based on the January, 1933, dollar equaling 100 cents. The dollar declined 3.6 per cent in purchasing power in the past year, the report said. Rises in food prices were mainly responsible for the increase which brought the cost of living back to the February level.

Eldorado Citizens Show Their Unity

"Let us all pledge to make our city, our state, our nation and our world a better place in which to live. If we practice Christian and Democratic ideas we can accomplish our goal," Mr. Nuveen declared.

The big parade, which moved out on time and continued without a break, contained 135 units and took about 25 minutes to pass a given place. It was under the direction of Al Adams, ETHS football coach, who said he had never before encountered such a spirit of interest and cooperation.

"Cooperation" was the keynote of the entire affair.

The program at the high school opened with community singing and the invocation by Rev. W. E. Mahanaga, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church.

T. Leo Dodd, president of the community development program, introduced committee chairman and gave the roll call of organizations, and introduced distinguished guests.

Guests Present

Guests included representatives of the three railroads serving Eldorado—the Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville and New York Central—Dr. Delyte W. Morris, president of Southern Illinois university, and several members of the staff, including Richard W. Poston, guiding hand in the development program.

Assembly singing and the benediction by Rev. C. C. Lowe, pastor of the First Methodist church, dismissed the program.

The affair was well covered with representatives of the local and visiting newspapers, photographers, movie cameramen in evidence. And the entire program was filmed by a crew from CBS-TV. "The Eldorado Story" will be presented on a national TV program in the near future.

Activities will continue this week, including a cleanup campaign on South Fourth street Wednesday, when a dumping ground will be cleared and landscaping started to convert it into a small city park.

Announce Plan To Merge Packard And Studebaker

NEW YORK (AP)—Studebaker and Packard, last of the independent auto makers, announced today a plan to merge into Studebaker-Packard Corp., with combined assets of around 253 million dollars.

Directors of both companies agreed to the proposal. It will be presented to stockholders at special meetings in August.

James J. Nance, 53-year-old president of Packard, becomes president and chief executive officer of the new company. Nance came to Packard two years ago after building a reputation as a top merchandiser with the appliance firm of Hotpoint Inc.

Paul G. Hoffman, chairman of Studebaker, will retain that post with Studebaker-Packard. Harold S. Vance, president of Studebaker, becomes chairman of the executive committee. Both Hoffman and Vance are 63.

The merger plan calls for executive office to be maintained at both South Bend, the home of Studebaker, and Detroit, headquarters for Packard.

"Employment at the plants of both companies," the officials announced, "can be expected to increase as Studebaker-Packard successfully achieves a larger penetration of the market."

The word "legend" originally meant a story intended to be read in churches.

Durocher Believes 100 Victories Needed to Win National League Pennant

By FRED DOWN
United Press Sports Writer
Manager Leo Durocher of the streaking New York Giants predicted today that "it will take 100 victories to win the National league pennant this year."

"Just mark it down," Durocher barked following the Giants' 8-5 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals Monday. "It's gonna take 100 victories to win this thing—there's a long road ahead."

Durocher indicated he visualized a two-team struggle between the Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers with pre-season contenders like the Cardinals, Philadelphia Phillies and Milwaukee Braves wiling under the pressure. All three have sagged during the last month while the Giants and Dodgers have traveled better than 700 clips.

Starting on May 21, the Giants have reeled off 24 victories in 30 games for an amazing 80 per cent while the Dodgers have hung on doggedly with 22 wins in 31 games for 710. During the same period, the Braves have a 15-14 record for .517, the Phillies sloughed off to 13-15 for .463 and the Cardinals virtually collapsed with 11-18 for .379.

Had 105 Last Year
The Dodgers won the pennant last year with 105 victories but they "needed" only 93 of 'em and no National league team had previously won 100 games since 1944. In fact, only 16 pennant winners have won 100 games.

Willie Mays and Jim Hearn were the heroes of Monday's triumph. Hearn handled Cardinal slugger Stan Musial like a 215 hitter, retiring him three consecutive times to break up Cardinal rallies and leave five runners stranded. Hearn forced Musial to hit into a double play with two runners on to close the first inning and retired him on outfield flies with two Cardinals on base in both the third and fifth innings.

Mays, collecting three hits for the third straight game, barged back into the fight for individual home run honors by blasting No. 19 off Gerry Staley and No. 20 off Royce Lint. The homers lifted Willie into a tie for second place with Hank Sauer of the Chicago Cubs—two behind Musial.

Walks Prove Downfall
Staley, who hasn't won since May 18 and now stands 3-7 for the season, paved the way for his downfall by walking Hearn to fill the bases with two out in the fourth inning. Davey Williams' single, Alvin Dark's triple and Whitey Lockman's bunt single then produced five runs and a 7-1 lead for the Giants.

The Giants and Cardinals played Monday's only major league game but a full schedule is carded for today and tonight. Of chief interest will be Cardinal southpaw Harvey Haddix' attempt to move within range of the record for consecutive scoreless innings of pitching.

A shut out against the Pirates would increase Haddix' total to 41 innings compared to Carl Hubbell's mark of 46-1-3 set in 1933.

Fraley Selections For All-Star Game IN THE Sporl Parade

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK —The election is on. The All-Star game for the July 13 All-Star game at Cleveland and to help the argument along here is Fearless Fraley's slate in the all-for-nothing struggle.

The so-called dream game usually proves very little, if anything, on the relative merits of the two leagues. This is a matter which must wait until a little October soiree known as the World Series.

But it does, usually, serve to honor the lads recognized by a majority of the fans as the best at their position—and these are my guys.

National league: Catcher, Roy Campanella, Brooklyn; first base, Gil Hodges, Brooklyn; second base, Red Schoendienst, Cardinals; shortstop, Alvin Dark, Giants; third base, Ray Jablonski, Cardinals; outfielders, Stan Musial, Cardinals; Duke Snider, Dodgers; and Hank Sauer, Cubs.

American league: Catcher, Yogi Berra, Yankees; first base, Al Rosen, Indians; second base, Bobby Avila, Cleveland; shortstop, Chico Carrasquel, White Sox; third base, Ray Boone, Detroit; outfielders, Minnie Minoso, White Sox; Hank Bauer, Yankees; and Ted Williams, Red Sox.

Names Pitchers Too

The voters don't elect the pitchers but, just to save Managers Walt Alston and Casey Stengel a bit of trouble, and to provoke a bit better argument, I'll name those, too. In the National league this corner's preference is Harvey Haddix of the Cardinals, amny An. tonelli of the Giants and Robin Roberts of the Phillies. Across the way, I'll take Virgil Trucks of the White Sox, Alie Reynolds of the Yanks and Bob Lemon of Cleveland.

As in any election, this leaves a lot of room for debate. Campanella may not be hitting but he's still the best catcher in baseball. Hodges, Schoendienst and Dark are stickouts while Jablonski is hitting up a storm.

Musial can't miss in the outfield and you have to go for Snider, having one of his greatest years and leading the league with an average in the .370s, over amazing Willie Mays. Sauer gets the call with his home run power.

Berra Called Best

In the American league, Berra still stands as the best catcher in the circuit. Rosen is rapping the cover off the ball even though he is no Nijinsky defensively. Avila has it at second with a big stick and Carrasquel has to be given the edge over a slowing Phil Rizzuto. Boone, at third, is the man who pulled the Tigers out of the American league cellar.

Among the outfielders, Minoso leads the league in runs, batted in and is fine defensively as well as a consistent long ball threat. Bauer is a hustler and in the same department. As for Williams, even a Williams who isn't playing regularly because of frequent illness and injury, he's still one of the best in the business.

Roberts, with an 8.7 record, may provoke the most questions among the pitchers, but he still is a great hurler. Proof of that is his recent one-hitter as well as a 15-inning performance which he had to win with his own hitting.

First professional race track in America was built in 1754, near Wetumpka, Ala., and was owned by Charles Weatherford.

New Record Holder Believes Santee Most Likely to Eclipse 3:58 Mark for Mile

TURKU, Finland — Lean John Landy of Australia today tabbed America's Wes Santee as the runner most likely to eclipse the amazing 3:58 mile record he established Monday.

"Santee has the best possibilities," said the 21-year-old Aussie agricultural student who slashed 14 seconds off the world record held for less than two months by England's Roger Bannister, the original four-minute miler.

Landy chuckled at the suggestion that his new record might prove unbeatable for a long time, and said, "It's not impossible to run even faster than I did yesterday."

"I don't think I'll be able to do it myself within the next few weeks," he explained. "I've had five hard races in the last three weeks, and I need a rest. I'm scheduled to run in two more races over here before July 1, at Gaevle and Gothenburg, and then I'll rest up for my meeting with Bannister in the British Empire games."

Empire To Open July 30
The Empire games will be held at Vancouver, Canada, July 30-Aug. 7 and the long-awaited finals of the mile run in that big meet, with Bannister and Landy meeting at last, is scheduled for the final day.

In London, trail-blazer Bannister said he also is pointing his training for the Empire games race and said "I can hardly wait to run against Landy."

"My work at the hospital doesn't leave time for proper training," said Bannister, who is a medical student. "But I certainly intend to be in shape to meet Landy next month. Vancouver, I suspect, will be my first opportunity to shoot for a new time, even though the clock won't be the main thing in the Empire games."

Landy disclosed that he is considering an offer of a teaching position in Britain for two years, which would permit him to continue running, but that, according to his present plans, "I'm going to wind up my running this year."

Cardinals' Bid for Surkont Stresses Pitching Plight

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—You can't outscore anybody when you're being outscored.

That's what any of the Cardinals will tell you.

The Red Birds' high bid for Max Surkont of the Pirates stresses their pitching plight.

General Manager Dick Meyer first sought Vern Law, but Branch Rickey hardly could part with such a promising right-hander and further sell his youth movement to the sparse Pittsburgh trade.

So the dicker was for Porky Surkont. Mahatma Rickey took Surkont, Sid Gordon, four others and $75,000 from the Braves for Danny O'Connell.

The St. Louis Nationals offered $100,000 and three players for Surkont, and General Manager Rickey's backing off is something in the way of evidence that the Cardinals are not fresh out of money at the moment.

"Rickey wanted to siphon our farm system," says Eddie Stanky. Two of the athletes demanded by Rickey were Dick Schofield, the little shortstop who collected $35,000 for signing, and Bill Virdon, a young outfielder who came from the Yankees in the Enos Slaughter transaction. Virdon is batting .386 for Rochester.

THE CARDINALS REQUIRE pitching and a pitching specialist. The Giants have remarkable firemen in Marv Grissom, Hoyt Wilhelm and Windy McCall. Jim Hughes takes charge as a relief worker for the Dodgers and Clem Labine doesn't exactly hurt the Braves in that department. The Cardinals put out configurations with Dave Jolly, Ernie Johnson, Phil Paine and recruit Ray Crone. Jim Konstanty may not be what he was when named the most valuable player of 1950, but still knows what to do for the Phillies in a traffic jam. The Reds offer Frank Smith when there is a game to save.

All the Cardinals have to put out there when in trouble is Alpha Brazle, who southpaws like a guy who will be 40 in October. There is no continuity to the Red Birds' relief pitching. It is even less predictable than the starting pitchers, outside of Harvey Haddix, the little left-hander with the big stuff.

So Stanky prefers to speak of 1952, his freshman year as head man and strategist, when between them the right-handed Yuhas and a younger Brazle won 24 while losing 7 and saved countless others. The Cardinals won 34 of their 88 victories that year by one run.

YUHAS BECAME ANOTHER victim of the Cardinals' pitching jinx with the first ball he threw in spring training last year. His arm turned out to be sore, never came around.

Haddix has been the Cardinals' lone pitching stickout this trip. He came into the Polo Grounds for the series with the red hot Giants with 10 and 3 and eight in a row, unbeaten since Apr. 29. Until his last couple of outings, Gerry Staley, usually a big pitcher in the spring, had been frightfully disappointing.

Vic Raschi has been spotty. Tom Poholsky just takes his turn. Stu Miller hasn't lived up to his promise.

For the first 700 meters Landy followed a blazing pace set by Erkki Kallia of Finland, and then he took over to lead the rest of the way "because I knew this was the time to go all out, and I knew it was up to me alone." Chris Chataway, the same British runner who paced and drove Bannister to his record performance, clung to Landy's heels until the final burst and finished 40 yards behind in 4:04.

En route to the mile record, Landy also eclipsed the 1,500-meter record of 3:43, held by Gundar Haefl and Lennart Strand of Sweden and Werner Luagg of Germany, by clocking 3:41.8.

ise of the fall of 1952. Joe Presko hasn't been the same since arm trouble developed in '51. Royce Lint is a left-handed knuckle baller who came up at a rather advanced age. Bill Greason was brought up from Columbus of the American Association to throw home run balls.

Oh, how the Cardinals could use Vinegar Bend Mizell.

Meanwhile, the scorers too frequently require adding machines.
